WOMAN LEAPS IN FRONT OF AN 'L' TRAIN "TERRANOVA GIRL FROM WRONG"

So Declares Tombs Physician Called as Witness for the Prosecution-Noted Alienists Tell of Tests That Prove Her Insane.

"I do not believe Josephine Terranova can distinguish between right and wrong in her action." So Dr. Frank McGuire, the Tombs physician called by the prosecution, sustained the defense in the Terranova case this afternoon.

Terranova, reserved the story of some heroic tests for anaesthesia made upon the body of his client by Dr. Graeme Hammond, one of the alienists retained by the defense. Not only did Dr. Hammond prick the right side Yet the prisoner gave absolutely no sign of pain. Dr. Evans also testified yesterday that she did not flinch when hot tubes were touched to her right side. This anaesthesia is the most pronounced symptom form of insanity from which it is alleged the girl suffers.

Clements Was Too Fast.

Fay was the choice of the many because of her good recent races, but Clements was fuet a little better when it came down to racing. Fay took the lead with Anna May and showed the way to the stretch, when Clements came along, winning handly from Fay, Anna May driving to hold third place. Winner Beat Starter.

Inquisitor, a different racing machine to-day than when he last essayed, beat the curtain at the start, and retrined his advantage throughout, winning cleverly. Vino, full of going, kept pace with Inquisitor to the stretch when he fell back, being passed by the erratic Quorum. The latter faltered in the last few strides, and Vino, coming again, nailed second place.

Outsider Made Running. When the big field got off in the fourth race the outsider, Nostromo, made the running, giving way in the stretch to Sho; Gun and Keator. The race resolved itself between the two,
